Answers.com is the place to go to get the answers you need and to ask the questions you want. One way for an interviewer to gain this perspective is to ask you an open-ended question like, "Tell me something about yourself that isn't on your resume." Think of this question as an opportunity to choose the most compelling information to share that is not obvious from your resume. Interviewers will sometimes start an interview with an open-ended question like, "Tell me about yourself." The question is a way to break the ice and make you feel more comfortable during the interview process. It's also a way for the hiring manager to get insight into your personality to help determine if you're a good fit for the job. This is one of several interview questions about you that ...
